

KÜLLIKI TALP

Külliki was born in Hiiumaa, an island off the coast of Estonia. She started her art studies in Leather Art at Tartu Art School. Later she turned toward painting and studied it at the Tallinn Academy of Arts where she graduated with a Master's degree. During this period, she spent a semester abroad at Rhode Island School of Design.

Having lived in Boston for many productive years, married and started a family, she now lives in London, working in her home studio.

Her paintings are about the power of colour. They are about different layers of space, different points of view in one image. She constructs two or more layers of painting. It can be different landscapes, different views or portraits.

Then she breaks one into pieces and layers it on top of the second image, so the two views emerge together.

The final result is like a memory eclipse with sharper or more blurred details.
