

Gema Phillips

Gema Phillips is an accomplished artist. Right after high school, she began studying at the Museum School of Fine Arts in Boston. Gema continued her education in the arts at Northeastern University where she earned a B.A. in Fine Arts with a teaching certificate. This schooling enabled Gema to continue painting in her studio and teach art. She has been doing painting and teaching ever since. Gema taught at the Brookline Arts Center for over 20 years where she passed on her knowledge to like-minded adults. Then she had the honor of teaching students at Mass College of Art.

Throughout her years of painting, Gema has developed her own style which incorporates her love of expressionism and her Lithuanian heritage. What makes her style unique is the color she uses to express the emotional qualities of her subjects, which translates into her landscapes and other imagery. Gema uses a variety of mediums, her favorites are oil monotypes and watercolor. Gema continues to create works of art that reflect her style, drawing upon her personal experiences and Lithuanian culture.
